THE VOID

Avalokiteshvara Bodhisattva, when deeply practicing prajña paramita, clearly saw that all five aggregates are empty and thus relieved all suffering. Shariputra, form does not differ from emptiness, emptiness does not differ from form. Form itself is emptiness, emptiness itself form. Sensations, perceptions, formations, and consciousness are also like this. Shariputra, all dharmas are marked by emptiness; they neither arise nor cease, are neither defiled nor pure, neither increase nor decrease. Therefore, given emptiness, there is no form, no sensation, no perception, no formation, no consciousness; no eyes, no ears, no nose, no tongue, no body, no mind; no sight, no sound, no smell, no taste, no touch, no object of mind; no realm of sight ... no realm of mind consciousness. There is neither ignorance nor extinction of ignorance... neither old age and death, nor extinction of old age and death; no suffering, no cause, no cessation, no path; no knowledge and no attainment. With nothing to attain, a bodhisattva relies on prajña paramita, and thus the mind is without hindrance. Without hindrance, there is no fear. Far beyond all inverted views, one realizes nirvana. All buddhas of past, present, and future rely on prajña paramita and thereby attain unsurpassed, complete, perfect enlightenment. Therefore, know the prajña paramita as the great miraculous mantra, the great bright mantra, the supreme mantra, the incomparable mantra, which removes all suffering and is true, not false. Therefore we proclaim the prajña paramita mantra, the mantra that says: "Gate Gate Paragate Parasamgate Bodhi Svaha."

— Heart of Great Perfect Wisdom Sutra

Let's start with nothing. No cards. Empty table. The void is the space of the reading. Some say that the void is Saturn, in his aspect as Kronos, time, who rules the domain that all things happen in (but we'll meet him later.) The sky is a void the planets move though, an empty hole that goes on forever. Perhaps the back of the card is the void, the Ein Sof (the Infinite), Ayin (the Nothingness), who precedes all things. Without nothing you cannot have anything. Without anything you cannot have something. Once you have something, well, now it's possible to have questions. Before we start, ask yourself: do you really want to know? do you feel lucky? or if not, can you love your fate anyway? Well, that's something.

— universalist Sufi prayer of invocation

If you're reading this, then my weird little deck is here in your hands, and you have a question like "what the hell is going on" or "why is it like this". Let me start at the beginning. My name is Jes, and I'm an astrolabist, which means I'm concerned with astronomy and astrology through the lens of how people understood them before the modern era: the math and mythology are deeply intertwined, and to get to the good stuff you need to understand a lot of interlocking systems. No particular part on its own is overwhelming, but all together is too much for the human mind to deal with. It is my hope that tarot can be a bridge between these different parts. Tarot, despite its origins as a simple card game, took on esoteric connotations as various people noticed numerical coincidences in its structure, and gradually reinterpreted it to be a projection of some deep structure of the universe, or the human mind, or aspects of the divine, etc. The Tarot we know today is deeply astrological, as systematic mappings to the planets, zodiac, and ecliptic were used to design the illustrations on the most recognizable historical tarot decks. Many of those associations are obscure now, and one goal of this project is to try to bring them to the forefront. At the same time, many people over thousands of years attempted to systematize the motion of the planets and the stars. They all made slightly different choices, but because they were all referring to the same real objects in the actual sky, similar patterns emerged in all of them. An extraordinary gift of our time is that information for cultures that once had sparse contact with each other are now freely available for anyone to read about. I have selected a few of the best known systems of astrology and divination to represent here, from a few of the world's largest cultures — not because they are the best, but because they are well-documented, and an easy place to start. I lament that it is impossible to know every idea that was ever revered by any culture, but I have done my best to present the little sliver of the world's knowledge that I have managed to understand. I hope you find them as beautiful as I do.

THE SYSTEMS

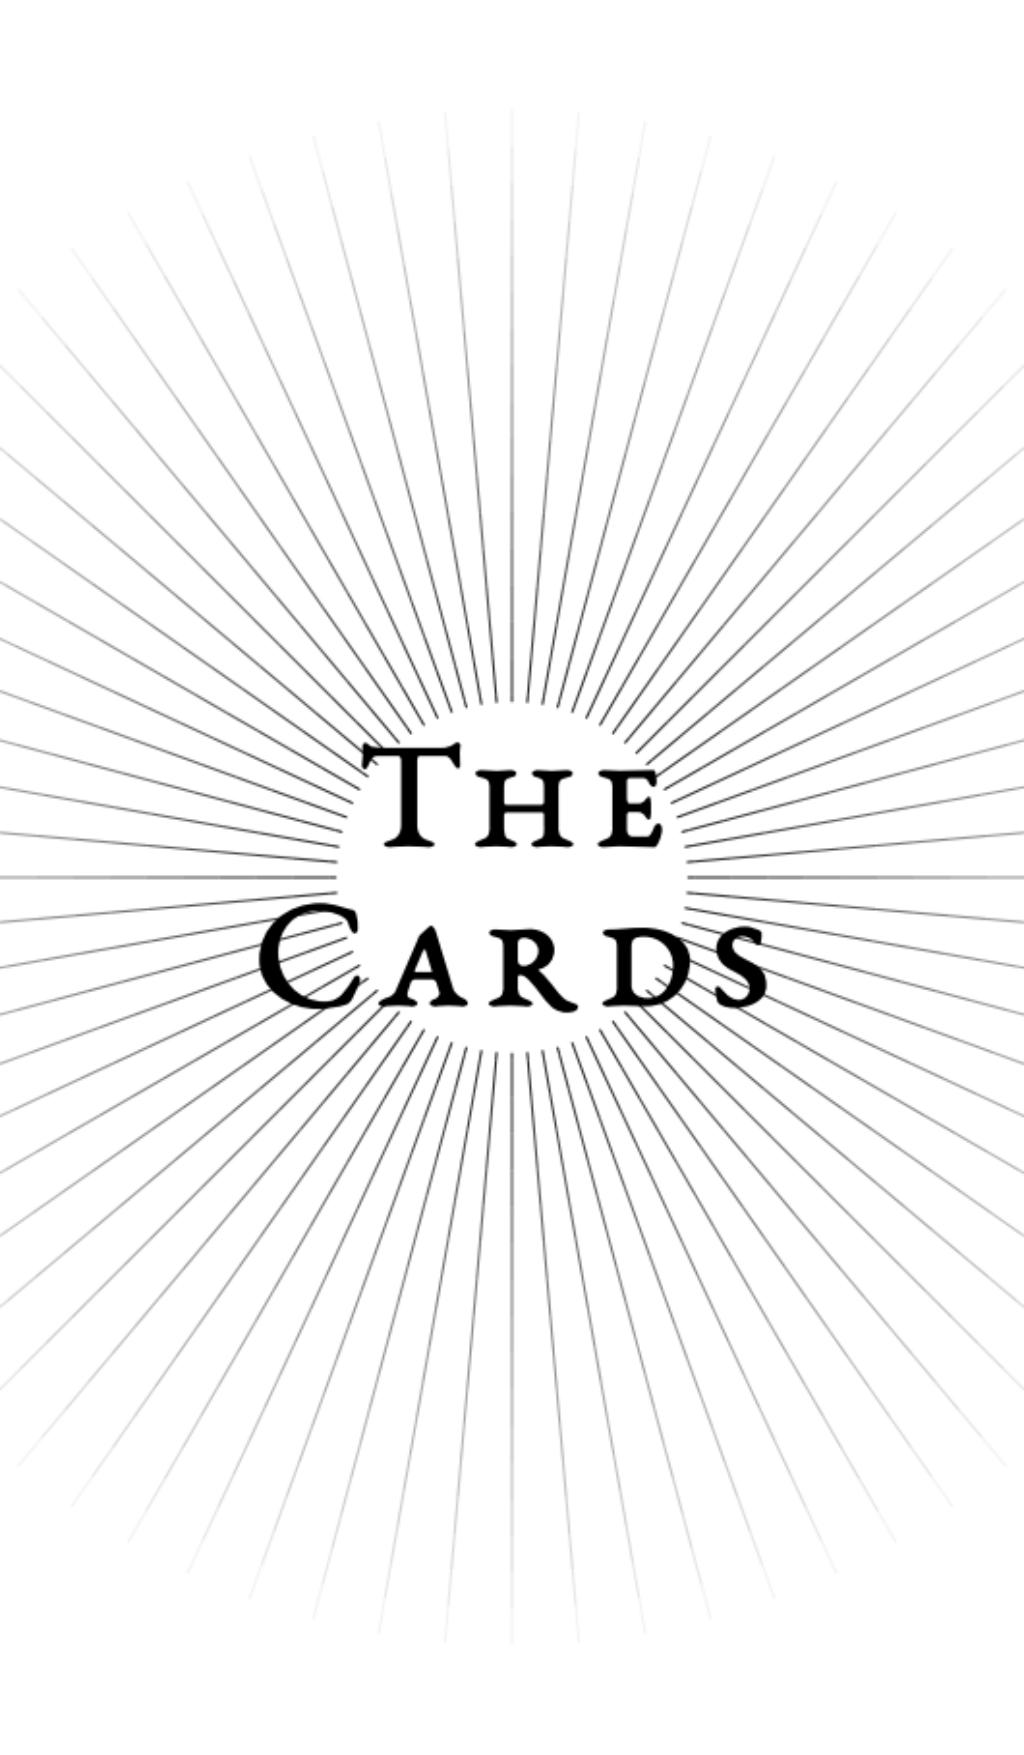

YIN AND YANG

*Therefore there is in the Changes
the Great Primal Beginning.*

*This generates
the two primary forces.
The two primary forces
generate the four images.
The four images
generate the eight trigrams.
The eight trigrams determine
good fortune and misfortune.
Good fortune and misfortune
create the great field of action.*

— The I Ching or Book of Changes,
translated by Richard Wilhelm, rendered into English
by Cary F. Baynes

This book is in two parts, the first part is concerned with the individual systems that appear on the cards, while the second part will examine each card individually, with reference to how each of those systems manifest on a particular card. Big picture, little picture. We'll start with the simplest system possible: duality.
